

UTAH INDUSTRIES DESERVE UTAH PATRONAGE.

The work of securing a collection of photographs of the manufacturing industries of this state with a view to placing them on exhibition at the exhibit room of the Utah Chamber of Commerce here to aid in the campaign now on for encouraging a more extensive patronage of home industries, is proceeding rapidly. Scores of pictures have been taken, and these are being mounted for exhibition.

Above are reproduced several of the photographs that will form part of the collection. They were taken expressly for The Herald by J. Brush Anderson, the photographer who is securing the photographs for the Chamber of Commerce.

JEWELERS' ASSESSMENTS DONALDSON TRIAL MONDAY

County Equalization Board Considering the Figures With View to an Increase.

The county board of equalization has under consideration the matter of increasing the assessments of the various Salt Lake jewelers. Assessor Brown has been in consultation with the board on the question and has advocated the increase, stating that when the assessments were made he was not fully informed as to the value of the stock carried in these shops. Jewelry stores are supposed to be assessed the same as other merchants on a basis of 40 per cent of the actual value of their stock. It appears, however, that the assessor and his assistants were not up on the value of jewelry and consequently returned the values much too low. The board held a short meeting yesterday, but transacted no business of importance. On Monday it will meet probably for the last time and then decisions will be made in all the important matters which have been taken under consideration including the reduction of the assessment of banks and the elimination of the assessment levied against hospitals.

The case was to have come up last May, but a continuance was secured by the defense because of the inability of certain witnesses to attend. It was alleged at the time that Donaldson wanted Bell to testify for him. Bell is in the county jail and has turned state's evidence.
